

Overlap

Imagining a redeveloped South Yarra Station in Melbourne - Overlap is not a futuristic interpretation, nor does it embrace the romance of nostalgia. Instead it coalesces glimpses of recent architectural history and explores the potential of masonry construction within the rigorous demands of urban infrastructure. It does this by embracing age old techniques, new uses and exploring the sculptural potential of masonry construction. Overlap seeks to express the architectural potential of bricks and then, through the simple act of composition, empower architects to invent inner urban mixed use high density developments.

Dominic Pandolfini

